
CAROLINA PLANNING JOURNAL

VOLUME 46 CALL FOR PAPERS

Carolina Planning Journal is accepting abstracts for papers relating to:

THE FUTURE OF LAND USE REGULATION

Over the past year, cities and states from Minneapolis to Oregon and California took unprecedented steps to overhaul their land use policies. Motivations ranged from affordable housing deficits to concerns around carbon emissions and municipal tax bases. What is needed to achieve comprehensive reforms elsewhere? What approaches will best address concerns of sustainability, equity, and efficiency?

TOPICS OF INTEREST INCLUDE BUT ARE NOT LIMITED TO:

- Land use regulation and (anti-) discriminatory housing markets
- Addressing accessibility and mobility issues through transportation and land use policy
- Framing and messaging of regulatory reform campaigns
- International regulatory approaches and their application to the US context
- Quantifying the fiscal and social costs of land use policies
- Stakeholder engagement and coalition-building strategies and case studies
- Land use regulation for natural hazards resilience

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

By August 14, 2020, interested authors should submit a two-page proposal. Proposals should include a title, description of the proposed topic and its significance, a brief summary of the literature or landscape, and a preliminary list of references (not counted toward the two-page limit). Final papers typically do not exceed 3,000 words. Proposals and questions should be submitted to CarolinaPlanningJournal@gmail.com.

By September 18, 2020, Carolina Planning Journal will notify authors regarding their proposals. Drafts of full papers will be due by December, and editors will work with authors on drafts of their papers over the course of the winter. The print version of the Journal will be published in the Spring of 2021. Carolina Planning Journal reserves the right to edit articles accepted for publication, subject to the author's approval, for length, style, and content considerations.
